

Westerville City Council's war on Christianity

With millions of dollars pouring into Ohio to advance left wing causes, one wonders how much of that money has found its way to Westerville City Council. While none of the currently constituted council members campaigned for gun control and LGBTQ+ legislation, nor has there been a clamor from residents of Westerville, you would think council would busy itself with the need to improve snow removal and working on the back log of infrastructure repairs.

But no, council is determined to weigh in on gun control and spend time and money on passing LGBTQ+ privileged class legislation as illustrated by their resolution to the state to promote unfairness, their resolution for privileged class in Westerville, their resolution to the state advocating separate gun control legislation for each city, and their ongoing determined efforts to punish those who do not agree with the LGBTQ+ rent-a-mob.

Bending to out of town pressures, the council does not really seem to care what the residents think nor the cost to the residents. The attorney hired by the city (hence paid for by the taxpayers) to help craft legislation, stated that they should expect litigation from both sides once the LGBTQ+ ordinance is passed. Why would any city council pass legislation that is not needed and yet will create litigation? Residents that have asked what has occurred in Westerville that makes this legislation necessary have not received answers. What one council member did cite is an incident that occurred in another country almost 70 years ago. Other questions that have been raised and gone unanswered include: "Would a member of the Muslim religion be required to hire employees from the LGBTQ+ privileged class?" and "Does the privileged class include pedophiles?"

It is unknown what percentage of residents are even aware of the efforts by city council to turn Westerville into San Francisco (only without the mild weather and ocean). There does not appear to be any effort by the fading newspaper media to inform nor any other media for that matter. Unfortunately, only religious leaders favorable to the legislation have weighed in. It appears that most religious leaders fear the LGBTQ+ rent-a-mob more than they do God.

So city council trudges on. Determined to make Christians second class citizens and members of the LGBTQ+ community a privileged class while saddling the cost of defending such legislation on the backs of taxpayers as well as businesses that the proposed Star Chamber court determines to have violated the LGBTQ+ religion.

Kaitlin Bennett put it succinctly in a tweet: "Imagine having the same rights as everyone, having an entire month dedicated to celebrating where you stick your genitals, having all of corporate America fly your flag, having an outrage mob behind you that will attack anyone who offends you, and still thinking you're oppressed."
